THE PIKES PEAK PINT

A Newsletter for the Pikes Peak Region of Alcoholics Anonymous

Please remember the Area Service Office is open only because of your continued financial support.

Our Primary purpose is to stay sober and help other alcoholics achieve sobriety.

Contributions can be made on the homepage of our CSASO website: www.coloradospringsaa.org or mailed or dropped off at the Area Service Office located at 1353 S 8th Street Suite 209, Colorado Springs, CO 80905

Or feel free to call the office and we can take your contributions over the telephone and charge manually whatever amount you wish to your debit or credit card. This option is available Tuesday—Fridays 9 a.m.—5 p.m.

The Area Service Office is $3,752.82 short of our budget as of August 1st 2021. Many groups have not contributed anything this year. Please help us get caught up. If your group or meeting is waiting to contribute please let us know so we can make needed adjustments.

I have heard some interesting statements about what the Colorado Springs Area Service Office and Intergroup are and are not over the last few months. While I would understand if the misinformation was just coming from folks who are new to the area or AA, but alas, this is not the case.

Just a bit of history, the ASO was incorporated in 1982 for the purpose to :

- (a) To provide a legal entity for the use of The Colorado Springs Area Service Office of Alcoholics Anonymous in conducting its business and legal transactions.
- (b) To provide a central office through which workers are available to carry the message of Alcoholics Anonymous to the alcoholic.
- (c) The corporation is to be a service entity only and is not a governing entity of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Central Offices are different -because they fill a different need

G.S.R.'s, D.C.M.'s, area committees, area assemblies and the General Service Conference are concerned with only AA's worldwide affairs.

Central offices (C.O.'s), intergroup and answering services are entirely separate. They handle local services only -such as coordinating local Twelfth Step calls, printing meeting lists and in some places furnish public information speakers for non-A.A. groups and for A.A. meetings in institutions. Our ASO also provides a local storehouse of AA approved literature, tokens and other items of interest. They provide 24/7 phone coverage, they host the area web site and are a clearing house for current AA meeting times and locations.

The central office is a service that AA requires and that we would gladly pay an outside agency to preform.

Tradition Eight

With so many members that have compiled so much recovery over so many decades, one could imagine AA being the leading name in counseling and rehabilitation services by now, easily paying for itself with the fees (and perhaps insurance funds) of the desperate, sick, and suffering. For a brief moment there might not seem anything wrong with that, or that it might even be desirable. What a mercy that even early on, AA's founding members had the foresight to see the danger inherent in branding ourselves "professionals" in this sphere. The Long Form of the 8th Tradition clearly states "We define professionalism as the occupation of counseling alcoholics for fee or hire."

Our work with other alcoholics and the program's emphasis on altruism should be inextricably linked. It might even be required for keeping ourselves sober, and it definitely affects our usefulness to the still-suffering alcoholic. We cannot be truly altruistic if expecting remuneration, and our experience, strength, and hope is cheapened in others' ears if a price is put upon it.

The work with others that we do, as part of our personal program, and to give back to AA what we have freely received, could not have the same urgency, potency, or sweetness, if it were passed along by contract. The method of "one drunk helping another drunk so the other drunk doesn't get drunk", an arrangement where both are equals, no one is "an expert", and the reward is not monetary, has many advantages over AA as a monopoly on Alcohol/Addiction Therapy.

There is an immeasurable difference between someone taking an hour of their time to work with a newcomer, with that newcomer knowing that it comes only from love of sharing the message and love for those still suffering, and any situation in which our passing on the message becomes a financial transaction. Besides the difference in experience for the one being helped, there is also a vastly different experience for the alcoholic who is in the position TO help: working with others keeps US sober, regardless of the effect on those with whom we share. This is "working out our salvation on... an altruistic plane" (p. xxvi), with "an entire absence of profit motive" (xxvii), and it is the way this program has survived and succeeded, one alcoholic to another, for so many years.

A God Shot

My first home group was in a church in Oakland CA, hidden away among the Redwoods, in the Oakland hills. Views of the Bay and evening light streamed through high windows. It was a gorgeous setting. But the beauty of the hills was lost of me in my last days of drinking, obscured by the misery of alcoholism. I really thought moving from Wisconsin to California would “cure me,” but by the time I hit Iowa I was drunk again. I had no friends, the boss hated me, I lived in a crappy house, it all stunk.

Hiking with my dog was the only thing I liked to do, but eight months after the move, I couldn't even do that anymore. My moment of clarity happened in a trailhead parking lot. Immediately after getting out of the car, I doubled over with dry heaves. I looked at my dog in the back seat, tail wagging, eager to get going, knowing we weren't going anywhere that day. I looked up at the beautiful California sky. I knew there was an AA meeting up the hill. I had looked it up online. I'd even driven up there a few times. But each time I got to the parking lot a voice in my head chanted, 'What's the use, your life is crap and it's never going to get better,' sending me back down the hill to the liquor store.

This time, though, as I looked up at the sky, another voice in my head said, “Look at how beautiful this place is. You don't have to live this way anymore. Go to that meeting up the hill.”

The next day I drove all the way up that hill, parked the car, and was met at the door by a nice man named Andrew who said, “Welcome to the Lincoln Square group! We're glad you're here!” I sat in the back hoping nobody would talk to me, and raised my hand when they asked if anybody was in their first thirty days. A woman gently approached me, handed me a meeting schedule with phone numbers, and said, “We often find as newcomers it's easier in the beginning if we go to a meeting every day.” I thanked her, but thought to myself, 'Really? You're kidding. A meeting every day? Not gonna happen.'

Well the next day I got a lesson in what she meant. I had no idea how to survive the day without the promise of a drink after 5. By early afternoon my body was practically humming with cravings. I remember thinking maybe I should go to another one of those meetings. And oddly, it was the cravings that kept me going to meetings every day. That one hour in the meeting was the only time of the day when I felt any relief!

They talked a lot about God at the meetings. I was an atheist, but they told me not to worry about that, just be open minded and keep coming back. More than once, someone recommended I ask “whatever higher power there might be” in the morning to help me stay sober during the day, then thank “whatever higher power there might be” at night for helping me stay sober that day. They said this would work, even if I didn't believe it. I figured I had nothing to lose, so I did it.

One day, a few weeks sober, the relief I got from that meeting on the hill didn't happen. I still felt totally miserable. Driving down the hill I thought, 'What's the point? My life is a sack of crap, and it's never going to change. Nothing I try to do works, I might as well drink tonight and hope I don't wake up the morning.'

In my wallet was a twenty dollar bill. I thought, 'I'll stop at the gas station on the way home, put the gas on the card and use the twenty to get the booze.' (I was paranoid about putting booze on a card. In my alcoholic mind, I figured if I didn't put my drinking on a card, I could hide it from the world!). Better still, at that hour there was never anybody there, so I'd be able to sneak in and out unseen.

Just as I finished filling up, out of nowhere, this young man approached me saying, "Excuse me ma'am, I am not a beggar! My truck broke down on Monterey, and I'm $16 short of a tow. If you could lend me $16, I will pay you back tomorrow. I'll give you my journeyman's card til so you'll know I'll pay you back. I need to get my car to the shop so I can go to work tomorrow." He didn't seem like a beggar. And such a specific amount to ask for? It seemed legit. So without a second thought, I pulled the twenty out of my wallet, and handed it to him and said, "Keep the change." He pulled a card out of his wallet, saying, "I am going to pay you back!" as he held it toward me.

I waved it away. "Don't worry about it," I told him. "You're doing me a favor. And good luck with your truck."

And he did do me a favor, because I didn't drink that night. What's more, on the way home, it occurred to me the odds of someone being at that gas station at that exact moment, asking for a such a specific amount of money, offering proof they'd pay it back so it seemed legit, and giving me a perfect reason to get rid of that twenty, well, it just seemed beyond coincidence.

I told some people in the meetings about this. They all shrugged their shoulders as if it were no big deal and said, "Oh, that was a God Shot. A little miracle where God wants to remain anonymous. Happens to us AAs all the time. If you make a habit of asking for help every day, you get it right when you need it."

Since that time, I've had many more God shots, and have heard other AAs share theirs. So now, when I talk with a newcomer, I pass along that wonderful advice given to me. I recommend they go to a meeting every day. Then, each morning, ask "whatever higher power there might be" to help them stay sober during the day, and each night thank "whatever higher power there might be" for helping them stay sober that day. And I make sure to mention they shouldn't worry if they don't fully believe it. Just doing the asking seems to do the trick.

Step Eight

When I was first introduced to the general idea of the twelve steps, the eighth step seemed completely unrealistic to me. "There is absolutely no way I will ever be willing to make amends to the people who were only wronged by me because they wronged me first." I thought to myself. I was certain that I would be able to prove that my actions were justifiable, making most of my potential amends unnecessary.

As I started to work the preceding steps thoroughly and honestly, I realized how wrong I was. Throughout the step work process, I became much more aware of how much damage I had caused over the years - I became much more open minded to the upcoming amends process. At some point I noticed things I had never felt before - feelings of remorse, a genuine desire for change and betterment, a care for others, a conscience. By the time I arrived at the eighth step, enough change had occurred in me and my life to have me fully convinced that these steps created miracles - I was completely willing to do whatever I was suggested to do to continue through this process.

Some names felt incredibly hard to write down. Logically, I knew I needed to make certain amends - I even truly wanted to be willing - but I just couldn't find the willingness in my heart. I spent many hours talking to a God of my understanding, asking for the willingness to make these amends until I was finally granted the courage to do so.
