Spiritual Experience Of Light Saves Me Another 24 Hours

I turned to a spiritual journey in the fall of 2018, where I learned how to hear God's voice. I found out I couldn't do both the journey with God and still drink. I made a choice to leave a 39 year love affair with alcohol, full of abuse and countless near death experiences, behind me. Our family was in ruins from the ravages of active addiction and I had finally found true peace from this new voice.

I was around 6 months sober when an unexpected gift from God saved me in sobriety. I had been tempting fate on this summer day in June, choosing to be very close to alcohol around my friends who were in active alcoholism and didn't know I was in the program of AA.

It was after I had experienced these close calls in almost reaching for a drink, when I left on an evening walk with God. I was writhing in pain from abstinence from alcohol. My ego told me I was missing out. As I spun inside self pity, my eye caught the light of the sun through thick tree leaves. It looked like the image was twirling, so I stopped and took pictures from my cell phone.

I stood with tears in my eyes while I saw a shape of a cross that got larger and larger. It was so beautiful. It took my breath away.

From 7:31 to 7:32 pm, God shone in His sun what looked like a cross to me. After this encounter, I journaled with God and asked, Why do you shine the light of Jesus's cross through the small opening in these trees?

I heard: "Your belief this is My son's cross overwhelms Me with great joy. His cross in My light is My gift to you for choosing Me and My enduring love. For you have been tempted to return to the lies of darkness all around you and you stay with Me here in My light. We carry the cross in joy and in turbulence together in My light. The cross is pure love from My son's heart to yours. Please share with your brothers and sisters, it's the togetherness as One with Me, who carries the light of the cross into eternity with Me."

And so it is, I am sharing with you my experience, strength and hope in a power greater than myself who saved me from drinking another day and every day I let my heart summon the strength to stay inside of His light, one day at a time.

A woman discovers a way to practice conscious contact while she goes about the business of the day

I got up this morning, and rolled off the bed to my knees to get the day off the ground right like it says to do on pages 86 and 87 of the Big Book. I felt disorganized and disgruntled. I knew from past experience that if I let this thinking continue that it was going to screw up my day. It is always best for me to get my head right by following these directions. I am not sure all of what the day has in store for me, other than plans that I made yesterday. But at least I am making a good attempt for positive outcomes for my endeavors. 2011 Grapevine

Step One

We admitted we were powerless over alcohol—that our lives had become unmanageable

Admitting that I was an alcoholic was never my problem - I knew that I was an alcoholic years before I was willing to make any changes in my life. Admitting that my life was unmanageable, however, was something I could not do. Throughout my drinking career I managed to climb the ladder of societal success – I finished high-school as Valedictorian with a full ride academic scholarship, I obtained my undergraduate degree, I always maintained consistent employment with upward mobility, I had a safe home with reliable means of transportation. How could my life be unmanageable if I am successful by all of societies measurements?

The truth is that I was very rarely a successful member of society, I just had enough material achievements to look good from an outside perspective. In my real life, I was in and out of jail. I couldn't maintain meaningful relationships. I resorted to violence and verbal destruction nine times out of ten. I constantly felt at war with my own thoughts. I hated everything about my world and my existence.

On my last night of drinking, my circumstances didn't look much different than they did any other night. I found myself in the back of a cop car being transported to jail, again. Something about that night was different. I felt so much internal disgust that it consumed me. I was overwhelmed with feelings I had never felt before – guilt, remorse, gut-wrenching fear. These feelings were enough to make me willing. it was not only clear to me that I was an alcoholic, but it was clear to me that I was an alcoholic that could not manage my own life.

Admittance wasn't the only key for me – I had to be completely ready to surrender. I waived the white flag with no reservation of any kind. I had no desire to try to beat the game or prove that I could live an even remotely normal life that included alcohol.

I was done.

Tradition One

Each member of Alcoholics Anonymous is but a small part of a great whole. A.A. must continue to live or most of us will surely die. Hence our common welfare comes first. But individual welfare follows close afterward.

In simple practice, Tradition One, sets our course for personal action around the fellowship. It is a reminder that as members of A.A. we our primary purpose is stay sober and help other alcoholics achieve sobriety. This is only possible as long as A.A. continues to function. This is the tradition behind putting some money in the basket, making coffee, cleaning up, doing service work, and every other simple chore required to keep the lights on and the doors open. It also speaks to an equally important role for the group member. To carry a message of depth and weight to the newcomer. The Big Book and other A.A. literature gives us a guide to the message we are to carry and again insures A.A. continued survival. Just as much as we allow our meetings to get mired in personal opinions, war stories, judgment and exclusion do we threaten the very existence of A.A. as a whole. It is important that we always remember, we may be the only voice a newcomer hears when they come into a meeting! Are we insuring the common welfare, or are we just dumping our garbage on the table?

Tradition One: Questions to Ask

Our common welfare should come first; personal recovery depends upon AA unity.

1. Am I in my group a healing, mending, integrating person, or am I divisive? What about gossip and taking other members' inventories?
2. Am I a peacemaker? Or do I, with pious preludes such as "just for the sake of discussion," plunge into argument?
3. Am I gentle with those who rub me the wrong way, or am I abrasive?
4. Do I make competitive AA remarks, such as comparing one group with another or contrasting AA in one place with AA in another?
5. Do I put down some AA activities as if I were superior for not participating in this or that aspect of AA?
6. Am I informed about AA as a whole? Do I support, in every way I can, AA as a whole, or just the parts I understand and approve of?
7. Am I as considerate of AA members as I want them to be of me?
8. Do I spout platitudes about love while indulging in and secretly justifying behavior that bristles with hostility?
9. Do I go to enough AA meetings or read enough AA literature to really keep in touch?
10. Do I share with AA all of me, the bad and the good, accepting as well as giving the help of fellowship?

Concept I for World Service

Final responsibility and ultimate authority for A.A. World Services should always reside in the collective conscience of our whole Fellowship.

Alcoholics Anonymous has been called an upside-down organization because the “ultimate responsibility and final authority for . . . world services” resides with the groups — rather than with the trustees of the General Service Board or the General Service Office in New York. In Concept I, Bill traces how this came to be. The first step in 1938 was “the creation of a trusteeship,” first called the Alcoholic Foundation, renamed in 1954 the General Service Board. Why? To perform the services the groups could not do for themselves: e.g., uniform literature, uniform public information about A.A., helping new groups get started, sharing with them the experience of established groups, handling pleas for help, publishing a national magazine, and carrying the message in other languages and in other countries. A service office was formed to carry on these functions under the board’s direction. Both the board and the office looked to the co-founders, Bill and Dr. Bob, for policy leadership.

In the midst of the “exuberant success” of early A.A., Dr. Bob became fatally ill and Bill asked, “When Dr. Bob and I are gone, who would then advise the trustees and the office?” The answer, Bill felt, was to be found in the collective conscience of the A.A. groups. But how could the autonomous, widely scattered groups exercise such a responsibility?
